Alumni Conference Room, Angell College Center

Join us in welcoming back to campus fellow Cardinal Tim Spofford '71 as a Distinguished Visiting Alumnus.

Tim Spofford is an author and copy editor.

His writing career focused on racial issues in education. Spofford's writing career was inspired by the May 1970 slayings on the Kent and Jackson State campuses amid the wave of protests against racism and the expanded war that spring in Southeast Asia.

For seven years, Spofford covered educational policymaking for the Albany Times Union in New York's capital city. Spofford has taught writing and journalism in schools and colleges. He's published articles in the New York Times, Newsday, Mother Jones, Columbia Journalism Review and other publications. He also worked as a copy editor, most recently at the St. Petersburg Times in Florida.

The Distinguished Visiting Alumnus Award is presented by the Office of Institutional Advancement to honor graduates for professional achievements, contributions to society and service to the alma mater.

Sponsored by the Plattsburgh Alumni Association, Plattsburgh College Foundation, and Arts & Sciences.
